Antidote: A Woman's Allure

Fashion is intensely personal, and that makes it interesting to me. I am really feeling the combination of nostalgia and classic silhouettes.

The truest sense of self is revealed through the clothes, but the focus is always on the woman; it's honest. I like the idea of the JH woman as one with a compelling secret, doll-like and demure, yet one to keep your eye on...

The fall '11 collection was inspired by feminine allure, both eccentric and traditional. Melancholy is transformed into something beautiful through color, prints and texture. From boucle and silk, to wool tweed and lace, each garment lends a subtle suggestion of cautious optimism.

Reminiscent of vintage TV/film personalities like 70's Boogie Nights madam played by Julianne Moore, and Mary Tyler Moore in the 70's, this season's woman is a quirky, smart, and multi-dimensional... a woman's kind of sexy... maybe not a man's, but certainly the envy of her friends.

Wear it well,

Jenny Han
